Holiday wishes from Executive Reardon

Each holiday season we're given the chance to reflect upon the past year, to look ahead and to count the blessings that each of us has received. This year is no different, and as you spend time with friends and family, I hope you'll also remember those who are less fortunate.

While the economy is beginning to show signs of improvements, and while Snohomish County has positioned itself to still be able to offer services to those in need despite budget cuts, there are many who are hurting.

Needs at food banks always increase this time of year, and local nonprofits are typically in need of an extra hand or a few volunteer hours. Giving back to the community is what keeps us going, and perhaps this holiday season you will have a chance to do so. Every dollar donated or hour volunteered make an incalculable difference in the lives of those in need in our community.

I wish you and your families many blessings during these holidays.

Sincerely,
